

Rose Lovett

Chair of the Board of Trustees, Glendale Gateway Trust

My husband and I moved to Wooler four years ago, finally fulfilling our dream of moving to the North of England. I am originally from Québec and lived and studied in Newfoundland before coming to Britain in the late 1980s. As a history graduate, I was fortunate to have the opportunity to develop my publishing career in the area of archival digitisation, working with collections from the British Library, National Archives and other like institutions. Outside of work, I have always been actively involved in the community, promoting literacy and music in schools, supporting the arts, human rights and environmental projects and holding various roles within charities. It has been a privilege to move to a place of such natural beauty - perfect for hill running - and to be part of and participate in the community of Glendale. I am pleased and honoured to be a Trustee of the Glendale Gateway Trust.
